[6] 次の2つの文章を読んで設問に答えなさい。ただし、イギリス英語で書かれているため、学習したスペリングと異なる場合があります。

Right now, astronauts are living and working 400 kilometres above us in space – and the world looks very different from up there. Astronauts can see how beautiful Earth is, and when they look at the lights of the world’s great cities at night, they know that for many people, this is a ( ① ) time to be alive.

But astronauts can also see how our world is changing. They look down and see the dirty waters of great rivers like *the Mississippi, and fires from trees burning in the Amazon and Indonesia. Over time, ②their photographs from space show us how the world’s great forests are becoming smaller, how some of the hottest countries are becoming drier, and how every year there is more plastic in the ocean.

Astronauts can see how we are changing the environment, but there are ③many other problems that they cannot see from space. They cannot see how many people go to bed hungry every night and do not have clean water to drink. They cannot see the millions of children who are not able to go to school, or the animals that are dying because their homes are disappearing.

These problems, which are important for people and countries all around the world, are called ‘global issues’. So, what are the biggest global issues today, and why do we need to know about them? What is happening to our world, and is it in danger?

The world has begun to change very fast – and as it changes, the global issues that are important in our lives change, too.

In *Utrecht, in *the Netherlands, a *Dutch boy opens a package. Inside, there is a ④T-shirt which the boy has been waiting for. On the T-shirt, it says Made in Bangladesh, but the T-shirt was not only made in Bangladesh. The material for the T-shirt came from cotton plants which grew on a farm in *Arkansas, USA. Later, the cotton went to Mexico. There, factory machines from Japan and Germany made it into material. The material then went by ship to *Dhaka in Bangladesh, and there it was made into a T-shirt. From Dhaka, it travelled to *Guangzhou in China. A Chinese company sold the T-shirt on the internet and sent it out the Netherlands.

One hundred years ago, many companies only made and sold things in their home country. But in today’s global economy, companies produce and sell things ( ⑤ ). It is becoming easier and easier to travel from one place to another, and to do business with people who live thousands of kilometres away. This is called ‘globalization’. Because of globalization, when something happens in one part of the world, there are changes for countries and people everywhere. ( ⑥ )
